„The Elephant Queen“

Directors: Victoria Stone & Mark Deeble
Script und Cinematography: Mark Deeble
Edited by: David Dickie, Victoria Stone

Production: Victoria Stone & Lucinda Englehart

The winning film features very diverse creatures and is aesthetically very pleasing and of impressive quality. The story is conveyed to the audience by the balanced deployment of various camera techniques and the use of atmospheric light.

The harmony between cinematography and editing is very impressive as well as trend-setting. The winning film tells a story of life, loss, home and love.

It is thrilling and breathtaking emphasizing the similarities between humans and animals. Animals whose habitats we seize. This visually stunning film takes us on an emotional rollercoaster ride and brings us closer to very distant creatures.

The winning film shows the herd's respect for each other and how they communicate. They stick together, are considerate and help each other.

But not everyone survives the whims of nature. Some die and their deaths are mourned.

The winner is Elephant Queen!
