„On Thin Ice“

A film by: Henry M. Mix, Boas Schwarz

An Altayfilm Production for MDR and ARTE

Even though climate change is not a new phenomenon it is difficult to capture and depict in a way that people do no longer downplay it and thus thwart decisive action to combat it. It makes it even more important for films to tell articulate stories supported by memorable images explaining what is at stake and what happens if we continue to act as we presently do. One film has managed to capture that very well. It uses vivid individual cases and unsettling images showing the effects of climate change on reindeer herders and Siberia' nature without losing sight of global contexts. The award for Best Science Film goes to: On Thin Ice
