„Deep in the Heart – a Texas Wildlife Story“

Script: Ben Masters, June Hershey, Don Swander

Director: Ben Masters

Fin and Fur Films Productions

This lovingly produced film portrays the natural world of a state that is better known in this country for its weapons policy. With its impressive images, however, it doesn't just rely on audience favorites like the cougar and the bear.

Camera, music and editing convey a clear message to the inhabitants of Texas to protect their wild animals and to guarantee them the necessary habitat.

In doing so, the film addresses sensitive issues that have been considered common law by many Texans for centuries. Unrestricted hunting, unregulated trapping, private land ownership, and uncontrolled use of natural resources, such as water. For an American film, lavishly but independently produced by American backers, this is remarkable.
